CROSS-REGISTRATION POLICY

The purpose of the cross registration program is to provide students the opportunity to study areas not represented by the offerings of their home college, at no additional tuition charge. In addition to general guidelines, each college has its own set of regulations, regarding cross-registration and students should make themselves aware of these for both their home campus and the campus they are visiting.

Cross Registration has been a service of the Member Institutions of the Hudson Mohawk Association since 1970, when the Association was chartered by the New York State Board of Regents. All full time matriculated students at Union are eligible to cross register in courses during the academic year offered at the colleges listed on the next page:

Adirondack Community College
Albany College of Pharmacy
Clarkson University-Capital Region Campus

Empire State College
Hudson Valley Community College
Maria College
Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute

Sage Colleges
Schenectady Community College
Siena College
Skidmore College
Southern Vermont College
SUNY/Albany
The College of Saint Rose

Please Note: All graduate level courses taken by Union undergraduates, including Leadership in Medicine and Combined Degree students through Clarkson University-Capital Region Campus will require completion of a special Cross Registration Form. These forms are available in the Registrar's Office in Silliman Hall. For more information contact Al Sacco, Assistant Registrar (518) 388-6015 or saccoa@union.edu

DESCRIPTION OF COURSES NOT IN THE 2018-19 ACADEMIC REGISTER

*Includes Revised Course Descriptions***

ANT-205 Culture and Masculinity. Kahn, A. This class examines the cultural construction of gender through the study of men and masculinity. The primary focus of gender studies has been on women and femininity but in recent decades scholars have increasingly come to recognize that gender is a relational concept and experience and that gender cannot be understood without understanding the role of men and the construction of masculinity. In this class, we examine how men and masculinity are culturally understood and created across different societies and how the construction of masculinity shapes the experiences not only of men but also of women and non-gender binary people. We use men and masculinity as a lens into understanding the construction of gender and we examine how gender relates to the family, religion, politics and economy across different societies.

ANT-244-Urban Anthropology. Samet, R. Throughout history cities have been celebrated as spaces of inclusion and diversity, so that it is all too easy to overlook the pervasive reality of exclusion, poverty, and injustice. This class looks at the promise and perils of urbanization. Each week focuses on a different world city. Bogotá. Istanbul. London. Los Angeles. Mexico City. Mumbai. New York. Paris. São Paulo. Although the approach is anthropological, the course also draws on materials from urban planning, geography, and political economy to understand the history, development, and everyday experience of urban space.

ATH-180: Global Performance Traditions. Venning, D. This course is a survey of nonwestern theatrical and performance forms, engaging with practices and traditions from a global perspective. We will examine traditions including Japanese Noh, Kyogen, Kabuki, and Bunraku; Chinese Xiqu (Chinese opera), Indonesian Wayang and Topeng, Indian Kathakali dance-drama, Persian Ta'ziyeh, Arabian shadow puppetry, Native American Indian Potlach ceremonies, West African Griot (praise singing), Caribbean carnival performance, and Latin American protest theatre. To conduct our examinations of these diverse traditions, we will read firsthand accounts, critical and theoretical literature, and theatrical texts, and interrogate the intersections between these performance traditions and social culture, including both political structures and religious ceremony and ritual. Through discussions, reading responses, and a longer research project students will hone their thinking about tradition, social structure, and performance on a global scale. CC: LCC, HUM, WAC

CLS-202 Introduction to Archeological Field Methods. Commito, A. Believe it or not, there is more to archaeology than raiding tombs and cracking a bullwhip. In this course students explore what archaeology is really like, from project design to the nitty-gritty particulars of fieldwork and those “ah-ha!” moments of discovery. The course is designed to introduce students to the basics of archaeological field methods through a combination of readings and hands-on experience, and to explore the history of our Union College community. What can we learn about people in the past through physical remains? What does learning about the past teach us about ourselves? What else do archaeologists do besides dig? What happens to the artifacts we discover? Who owns them, and where do they go? How are ancient objects used to shape cultural identity and global politics today? To address these and other questions, we examine archaeological research from around the world, with a special emphasis on the ancient Greek and Roman Mediterranean. Students use their new skills in interpreting material culture to analyze the physical world around them in new and surprising ways.

EGL-283: Pilgrims, Flaneurs, & Pranksters: The Walk in Literature. McAuliffe, S. From the poems of William Wordsworth to contemporary novels such as Teju Cole's Open City, literary narratives often feature journeys taken on foot. Among other things, a walk, in literature, can structure plot, serve as metaphor, or anchor a stream-of-consciousness narrative within a physical setting. A walker, like a reader, is a consumer of sights, but she is also a producer of thoughts, words, and creative pathways through the world. In this course we will investigate the relationships between walking, thinking, reading, and writing, considering the ways we move through spaces (natural, urban, public, solitary) and the forces and questions that shape our experiences in those spaces. Our texts will include standard novels and essays, as well as work by walking artists like Richard Long, audio-video artist Janet Cardiff, and street artists, for whom the world is the page and the walker is the reader.

Students will write traditional academic papers, but we will also walk, and some assignments will encourage students to create walking texts of their own.

ECO-369: Economics of Firm Strategy. Yaisawarng, S. This course explores challenging business problems facing managers and develops a set of tools used to analyze a firm's competitive environment, perform a comprehensive analysis of its position and make strategic decisions based on economic principles. It enables managers to place their organizations with a competitive advantage and to perform better than their competitors.

HST-100: Walls: First-Year Seminar in History. Madancy, J. This is a research seminar for first year students interested in History, and it is devoted to a theme chosen by the instructor, in this case, the very timely topic of Walls. We will explore the reasons for building walls in many countries at different points in time, analyze whether the wall did what it was intended to do, and examine how various walls have been remembered. Students will learn how to read, interpret, and use primary and secondary sources, and write a term paper based on their own original research.

HST-127: Strange Days: US Since 9/11. Feffer, A. Since 9/11, the United States has entered a period that is tumultuous, faltering and uncertain. This course will explore that most recent history of our times, from the attack on the World Trade Center to the Gulf War to the 2008 financial crisis and the election of 2018.

HST 311: Frontiers in North America. Foroughi, A. The word “frontier” is widely used in the popular culture and media of the United States but with reservations in scholarly analysis and with less enthusiasm in Mexico and Canada. This course first examines the multiple meanings of the term “frontier.” Then it looks at strategies used to cope with conquest, violence, accommodation, assimilation, and imperial goals. By investigating religion, gender, land policy, economic enterprises, diplomacy, and armed conflict, this course compares and contrasts frontiers over time in North America – Native North America, Spanish North America, British colonies, New France, British Canada, and what would become the United States, extending from coast to coast. CC: LCC

ISC-217: Sports, Society, and Culture. Cohen, B. Gmelch, G. Most people in the industrialized world have some interest in sport; many are downright fanatical about it. They attend games, read the sports pages and sport magazines, and talk endlessly about the subject. Although they often have knowledge of the most obscure facts about a particular sport, team, or player, they do not necessarily understand sports on either technical or societal levels. What are the physical and psychological characteristics of elite athletes? How are they different from the rest of us? How do performance enhancing drugs actually work? How is sport linked to other institutions of society? What role does sport play in transmitting values to youth? Does sport really build character? How has the influence of "big business" altered sports? Does sport perpetuate gender-role stereotypes? These are some of the many issues that we will examine in this course. We will also use sport as a vehicle for understanding culture patterns and social problems in society.

ISC 220: Global Engagement. Osborn, M. This course is intended to prepare Minerva Fellows for their placements across the globe, ranging from Cambodia to India, South Africa, Uganda and beyond. The goal of the Minerva Fellowship Program is to foster global learning through critical inquiry, intercultural exchange, and community engagement. Through examining concepts and critiques within international development, humanitarian aid, and social enterprise, this course will require students to think critically about international engagement in developing countries, what it means ‘to help,’ and how to do so in culturally appropriate ways. Drawing on interdisciplinary scholarship, students will embark upon a focused research project that will help them to further contextualize their intended work within their specific placements. Moreover, this course will offer theoretical and practical approaches in working with both nonprofit and social entrepreneurship sectors. Working in conjunction with former Fellows, local scholars and experts, this course will help prepare the next generation of Fellows for their work abroad.

MTH-334: Partial Differential Equation. Math Staff. We will study theories of partial differential equations (PDEs) and boundary value problems. Both analytic and numerical methods will be introduced to examine the solutions of elliptic, parabolic and hyperbolic types of PDEs. Real-world examples and applications include signal, image and video processing, medical imaging, heat conduction, wave traveling, and so on. Prerequisite: MTH-234 or permission from the chair. Prerequisites: MTH-234 or MTH-130 and MTH-199 or permission from the instructor.

PSC-262 Race and US Politics. Plencer, J. This course is designed as a broad introduction to the role of race in US politics, from the founding of the American republic through the present day. Though fundamentally concerned with politics, political processes, and governing institutions, the course examines questions regarding race, ethnicity, and power that routinely cross disciplinary boundaries. By drawing on readings from political science, history, policy and legal studies, as well as popular culture, mainstream media, and documentary films, students will situate and account for race within what mid-20th century American writer James Baldwin once described as “the story of America”—which he cautioned “is not a very pretty story.” By engaging with the politics of race expansively, and wrestling with ideas that represent a variety of political commitments and perspectives, the goal of the course is for students to develop a nuanced picture of how Americans have understood race in the past, how racial meaning has shifted through law and policy discourses over time, and how the defense of, accommodation for, and struggle against racial and ethnic oppression is fundamentally constitutive of the American political experience. CC: SOCS, WAC. Prerequisite: PSC-111 and 112 or SO standing

PSC-339 Seminar in Political Theory: Neoliberalism’s World and its Critique. Seri, G. Between 1978 and 1979, Michel Foucault devoted his lectures at the Collège de France to the neoliberal art of government. Neoliberal ideas and policies, drawing on the belief that markets are best to generate and distribute wealth as to promote freedom, including political freedom, gained ground around the world since the 1970s. Leaders such as Ronald Reagan and Margaret Thatcher, and international financial organizations such as the IMF and the World Bank helped diffuse support for massive deregulation and privatizations to free market forces that, it was argued, would eventually benefit everyone. Four decades later, still dominant, neoliberalism has been blamed for unprecedented levels of income inequality, social exclusion, and violence, as for catastrophic environmental crises that put at risk life on Earth. Set to explore the ways in which Neoliberalism has transformed lives and shaped views and experience of politics, in this seminar we will revisit the work of pioneer thinkers such as Friedrich Von Hayek and Milton Friedman, as well as philosophical and fictional pieces that nurtured the neoliberal political imagination. As we embark in this exploration, the work of Foucault, Wendy Brown, and other contemporary political theorists will challenge us to think of neoliberalism in political terms. CC: WAC

PHL-174 Introduction to Biomedical Ethics. Baker, R. PHIL 174 is a historically based introduction to biomedical ethics. Among the subjects treated are the evolution of the discourses, core concepts, models, and theories of biomedical ethics from the Hippocratic Oath to the Patients' Bill of Rights. We shall also discuss classic biomedical ethics cases, from the case of Karen Ann Quinlan to current controversies over the use of CRISPR to create gene-edited babies.

PHL-293 Education: Why Bother? Sommerlatte, C. In this course, our aim will be to understand whether and how education can contribute to a good life. To do so, we must understand the nature of education itself, and we shall examine educational theories from a variety of historical traditions (Platonic, Confucian, Early-Modern) as well as more recent ones (e.g., Paulo Freire, bell hooks). To deepen our understanding of these theories, and to see their relevance, we shall apply them by reflecting on our educational experiences at Union. Through the above, I hope to guide you in formulating your own conception of education and its value.

PSC-214: Democratization and De-Democratization in Eastern Europe. PSC Staff. The course tracks the contemporary political history of Eastern Europe from state socialism and the democratic revolutions of 1989 to the current rise of illiberal democracy and right-wing populism. After an introduction into regime types and definitions of democracy, in the second section, we will explore the challenges unique to post-communist transitions, the trajectories from seemingly similar points of departure in state socialism to early success stories of consolidated democracy (Czech Republic, Poland) and reform laggards (Romania, Bulgaria). We will also examine some of the necessary conditions for successful democratization. The last section of the course will explore the possibilities of backsliding into authoritarian rule in Eastern Europe and the rise of illiberal democracy (Hungary).

PSC-356 International Law. Siegal, D. International law is the body of rules that are designed to regulate and govern the behavior of states. Although the “law of nations” has existed for centuries, most international law has been created during the past 70 years. Indeed, since the end of World War II, the breadth and depth of international law has expanded rapidly, extending into nearly every issue area of international politics. The mere existence of international law, however, does not imply or even require an international legislature. The international arena remains fundamentally different from national polities in that there is no world government to make or enforce rules. As a result, power and politics remain central. While many argue that the development of international law has shaped world politics, few would suggest that it has transformed it completely. The governance of states, for all of its development, remains partial and incomplete. In this course we focus on the role of power and politics in international law, the basic mechanics of how international law is made and enforced, and, finally, the rules of international law in specific issue areas, including the laws governing the use of force, international humanitarian law, international criminal law, international environmental law, and human rights law. Pre-requisite PSC 111 or 112 or 113 or SO standing

SCH-400- Senior Scholars Colloquium. Matsue, J. When called upon in class to answer a complex question, unexpectedly told that you must give the next toast at a friend’s wedding, find yourself giving the speech whose file you just lost on your laptop, or simply chatting with the clerk behind the counter at the bank—we are all constantly confronted with moments that call upon our creative energies to convey our thoughts seemingly spontaneously—to improvise our way through life. Improvisation, although commonly thought of as a theatrical practice or characteristic of jazz, is actually a pervasive action in our everyday lives. As such, in this course students will creatively explore the very idea of improvisation, through active engagement in the classroom, theatrical and musical exercises, and writing experiments. By embracing Bergren, Cox and Detmar’s philosophy to “Say Yes! And . . .,” instead of dismissing difficulties and being curtailed by fear, students will embrace their creative potential to improvise in all parts of their personal and professional lives.

SPN-413-01 Death to Freedom! Authoritarianism in Spain. Collinge, D. The conflict between democracy and authoritarianism has long occupied the hearts, minds, and memories of people in Spain. When French liberalism threatened to bring constitutional democracy to Spain in the early 1800s, defenders of the monarchy shouted in protest: “¡Muera la libertad y vivan las cadenas!” Death to freedom! Long live our chains! In the 1930s, opponents of Spain's Second Republic similarly exclaimed “¡Muera la inteligencia! ¡Viva la muerte!” Death to intelligence! Long live death! With this history in mind, this course will examine novels, films, painting, legislation, and political theory that address Spain's challenges on the road from collapsed empire (1898), to dictatorship (1923-1930), to Republic (1931-1936) and through Civil War (1936-1939) back into dictatorship (1939-1975). Prerequisites: SPN 203 and two 300-level classes or permission of the instructor. CC: LCC, HUM, HUL, WAC, WS, FLM
